GEORGE H. DAW,
GUN MAKER

TO HER MAJESTY'S ARMY AND NAVY AND THE
HON. COUNCIL OF INDIA,

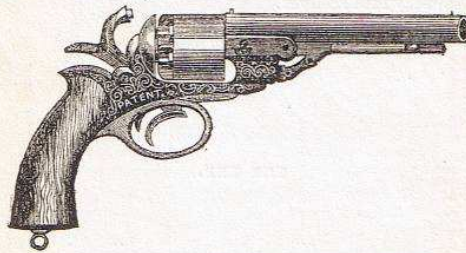

37, THREADNEEDLE STREET, LONDON.

RESPECTFULLY invites the attention of Gentlemen belonging to Rifle Corps and Clubs to inspect the valuable improvements he has lately introduced in Rifles and Bullets, on General Jacob's principle. By means of new machinery he is enabled to offer a more accurate and effective weapon at a lower price than ever yet introduced, insuring a range from 50 up to 3000 yards. He has lately introduced a new and simple form of Breeching and Patent Cartridge: its advantages are—viz., quick and easy loading (without fouling) and uniform shooting. Mr. DAW's practical knowledge and high reputation at home and abroad will be a guarantee for all articles supplied. The excellence of his Rifles over the Enfield, and every other description, will be seen by reference to General Jacob's Third Edition "On Rifle Practice," and "The Rifle, and How to Use it," p. 66, by Hans Busk, Esq.
